raising hope transforming lives
Dear KAFSC Friends and Family,

We are excited to celebrate our 28th year and to recount our yearlong journey, which has been nothing short of remarkable.

From the opening of the Manhattan satellite office, to the launching of the Volunteer Committee, to the organizing of the New York Asian-American Youth Conference, to our first graduating class of First Aid and CPR-certified babysitters, KAFSC continues to grow by listening intently and responding to the needs of our community.

We are guided by community leaders at the forefront of social justice movements. Last year, we honored Judge Tako Setia for her work in decriminalizing human trafficking victims, and expanded our own capabilities to serve those who have been referred to us by the court. We also recognized Ted Bunch of A Call to Men, dedicated to strengthening community accountability in ending all forms of violence and discrimination against women and girls. After all, engagement of both genders is critical to stamping out gender violence. KAFSC is now exploring ways of educating male advocates and inviting men to become part of the solution.

The Annual Report is a testament to the steadfast commitment of all the people who make up KAFSC — clients, staff, and multitudes of hundreds of volunteers and supporters who come from different backgrounds but share one vision: creating a violence-free society.

Behind the numbers in these pages are countless stories of hope, in which your support has been indispensable. We are able to provide the breadth of services we do only with the support and involvement of dedicated individuals like you.

There are so many people to thank, and where to begin? Thank you, KAFSC family and friends, for dedicating your time and resources to this incredible journey. We are a movement when we stand together.

With gratitude,

Bomsinae Kim

Most programs are free or offered at a minimal cost, thanks to generous grants and funding from private, corporate, and government sources. All our bilingual counselors have a master’s degree in social work, counseling, or mental health. All cases are kept strictly confidential, and clients retain their right to privacy, except as required by law.

As of March 2016, we are thrilled to be offering direct services through a Manhattan office as well as our regular Queens location. All appointments can be made by calling the 24-hour bilingual hotline: (718) 460-3800.

INDIVIDUAL & FAMILY COUNSELING

KAFSC’s core program is crisis intervention and counseling on a short- or long-term basis, available to all clients regardless of their background. We offer one-on-one sessions or integrated sessions that include other family members. Counseling helps address emotional distress, depression, isolation, conflict, fear, and anger, often triggered by domestic violence, sexual assault, child abuse, or other personal or family turmoil. Additionally, counselors frequently provide support on issues such as divorce, parenting, intergenerational conflict, poverty, crime, addiction, and bereavement.

YOUTH COMMUNITY PROJECT TEAM (YCPT)

YCPT is operated virtually by a group of local high school students dedicated to creating positive changes in the Korean American community. Through weekly discussions and analyses of the community’s needs, these young volunteers learn about social justice advocacy and hone leadership skills while forming their identities as individual agents of change. In May 2016, YCPT held the first-ever New York Asian American Youth Conference in Queens, with two local organizations—Minkywon Center for Community Action and Korean Community Services of Metropolitan New York.

HODORI AFTER-SCHOOL PROGRAM FOR ELEMENTARY AND MIDDLE SCHOOL STUDENTS

Based on New York City’s development framework, the year-round Hodori (“Little Tigers”) Program helps children ages 6 to 14, from low-income, immigrant, working families. The children build self-esteem and improve their communication and social skills by engaging in a mix of therapeutic, creative, and academic activities that are culturally relevant and developmentally appropriate.

Children meet three hours after school every day school is in session, and come for full days during the summer. Where applicable, children receive individual counseling on a short- or long-term basis, and we encourage Hodori parents to interact with our staff regularly. In mid-2012, after government funding cuts, Hodori adopted sliding scale fees in order to meet demand. In September 2014, through DCPD funding, we were able to add a second site that serves middle school students in one of the most impoverished areas of Queens. Our Hodori after-schools are currently offered at East-West School of International Studies (EWSIS) and J.H.S. 189 Daniel Carter Beard School.

UNNI-HYUNG MENTORING PROGRAM

KAFSC’s “Big Sister–Big Brother” program matches clients ages 10 to 18 with an adult, typically a young professional or an older college student, who provides friendship and guidance. After our careful recruitment and covering of potential mentors, we introduce participants to caring individuals who serve as both friend and role model. These positive relationships enable mentors to help little brothers and sisters broaden their interests, cope with identity issues, improve their self-esteem, and develop school and career goals.

PROJECT GIRLS OWN ARTISTIC LEADERSHIP

Supported by New York City’s Young Women’s Initiative, KAFSC’s Project GOAL: Girls Own Artistic Leadership is a new program that combines artistic expression, critical thought, technical skill-building, and community engagement to develop positive identity and leadership skills among young Asian American women ages 14 to 18. Project GOAL: participants engage with various forms of media arts to examine cultural ideas about gender, sexuality, and relationships. Every year, there will be two cycles of ten weeks each. In 2016, we focused on the advertising industry and photography.
VOLUNTEER TRAINING

A semianual five-week, once-a-week intensive training course prepares bilingual volunteers to staff the 24-hour hotline. Training is given on the nature and incidence of domestic violence, sexual assault, and child abuse and on related issues. Volunteers learn techniques for crisis intervention and counseling and details about community resources. While on hotline duty, volunteers are supported by a KAFSC staff member. When not covering the hotline, these trained volunteers provide valuable assistance and advocacy to clients in courts, hospitals, schools, and social services agencies.

HARMONY

Harmony is a group of trained hotline volunteers and advocates who help recruit and coordinate volunteers. The group follows the Center’s mission of promoting leadership and offering peer support. Harmony supports KAFSC on all its fundraising and awareness efforts, including the Annual Silent March, One Day Restaurant, and the Purple 5K Run.

SUNDOJAH TRAIN-THE-TRAINER PROGRAM

This is a new initiative that aims to move beyond volunteer training and mobilize trained individuals (Sun-do-jah means “Advocates” in Korean) in the community who can reach and educate others through personal and community-based networks.

SILENT MARCH AGAINST DOMESTIC VIOLENCE & SEXUAL ASSAULT

Every year during Domestic Violence Awareness Month (October), KAFSC organizes a silent march in partnership with local police, churches, various sister agencies, and other community-based organizations, to raise awareness about domestic violence and sexual assault and promote social justice. This march is a culmination of community events and activities held throughout the year. Participants march in silence through the streets of Flushing protected by police escorts, honoring the many lives lost to domestic violence and reaffirming our commitment to its eradication.

TRAINING, EDUCATION, & OUTREACH

We offer ongoing community workshops throughout the tri-state area covering a broad range of subjects, including parenting and communication skills, relationships, anger management, conflict resolution, sexuality, family dynamics, and other topical issues, as well as information sessions about KAFSC’s programs and services. We also speak at school events, appear on radio and TV, and write regular editorial columns in the Korean press. We visit schools, churches, hospitals, police stations, and other nonprofit and civic organizations to reach out to the community. All our workshops are free and open to the public.

Lisa is the victim of emotional, verbal, and financial abuse by the husband who abandoned her family. She was left alone to raise two sons, a one-year-old and a three-year-old. Lisa had called the hotline after reading a pamphlet one of our members had given her. Although only one out of hundreds who had answered the call came forward to seek help for a crime that had been committed against her, and future victims may now know that help is available. This proved to me that any action can be helpful and meaningful. Hearing the many lives better.

When I first walked through the doors of YCPT, I was a quiet, sheltered sophomore. Knee deep into my teenage years, I was at a loss of what to do with my time. Once I began to open up, I learned about the power of small action and big impact. I learned to be a leader.

During my years with the group, I have seen how young advocates working with YCPT can make a big difference. Even small groups like YCPT can create significant change in the community. During my time with YCPT, I have seen the impact of our work firsthand and am proud to be a part of this organization.

I learned a lot about leadership at YCPT. Two years ago, the wallflower me would never have thought I could do a 30-minute talk on this issue that affects all of us—whether we personally have experienced it, have witnessed others suffering, or just have heard about it. Because we are teenagers, we presented our information and created discussion in a way that got teenagers’ attention. Whether they had heard about a case in the community, or have barely thought about it. The generous and critical support we have received from foundations, businesses, and individuals, as well as grants from state and local government agencies, is the linchpin that continues to keep us alive. With each gift and grant, we not only received not only the vital funds to keep our work going, but who a strong affirmation of our mission, and what definitely feels like a personal encouragement for each of us to keep the faith, and stay the course. We are grateful for the following generous funders whose support gave us the courage and services possible.

What’s the best thing that has happened since you started getting involved with KAFSC? What is your favorite experience?

Amazing people such as those who have been much patience and dedication. Through KAFSC and other funding endeavors, we have become great friends with John and Catherine and so many pitiful people. They inspire us to get more involved. We also have found memories of enjoying the auction given us the chance to meet the Davis and enter John Davis and his wonderful home. An ornament, being part of the ZA Anniversary Gala meet them designed and produced this gorgeous Gala Program Journal is something I would forget. I have hard work, but it is a lot of love, and a large heart, especially after leaving for New York to stay at home more and risk losing full time. The Gala Journal turned out beautifully, and was you pass you can be happy to find this center in a personal way.

You have been a sponsor for the Annual Gala for many years. Why do you support KAFSC?

First and foremost, I am a wife, a mother, and a woman. It feels personal attachment to what KAFSC does for women and children. Our heart goes out to those affected by domestic violence who have no support network. I don’t think much about the Center, and to its services and funds in the need. A critical resource for Asian community, KAFSC provides not just safe haven, but job training, child care, and youth and mentoring programs. It fulfills critical needs children helping by the organization grow to be caring parents who get involved in the community. Plus, I felt from the first moment, and have witnessed over the years, just how dedicated this group’s volunteers and staff are, pouring out our care and support.

What do you want people to know about KAFSC?

KAFSC is not just for women—it offers holistic services to the entire family. The Gala Journal turned out beautifully, and was you pass you can be happy to find this center in a personal way.

What do you want people to know about KAFSC?

KAFSC is not just for women—it offers holistic services to the entire family. The Gala Journal turned out beautifully, and was you pass you can be happy to find this center in a personal way.

What is the best thing that has happened since you started getting involved with KAFSC? What is your favorite experience?

Incredible people such as those who have been much patience and dedication. Through KAFSC and other funding endeavors, we have become great friends with John and Catherine and so many pitiful people. They inspire us to get more involved. We also have found memories of enjoying the auction given us the chance to meet the Davis and enter John Davis and his wonderful home. An ornament, being part of the ZA Anniversary Gala meet them designed and produced this gorgeous Gala Program Journal is something I would forget. I have hard work, but it is a lot of love, and a large heart, especially after leaving for New York to stay at home more and risk losing full time. The Gala Journal turned out beautifully, and was you pass you can be happy to find this center in a personal way.

You have been a sponsor for the Annual Gala for many years. Why do you support KAFSC?

First and foremost, I am a wife, a mother, and a woman. It feels personal attachment to what KAFSC does for women and children. Our heart goes out to those affected by domestic violence who have no support network. I don’t think much about the Center, and to its services and funds in the need. A critical resource for Asian community, KAFSC provides not just safe haven, but job training, child care, and youth and mentoring programs. It fulfills critical needs children helping by the organization grow to be caring parents who get involved in the community. Plus, I felt from the first moment, and have witnessed over the years, just how dedicated this group’s volunteers and staff are, pouring out our care and support.
